

Concurrent Session Call for Abstracts

Deadline: Sunday, April 30, 2017

As Behavioral Health Professionals, the Native American Training Institute, Inc. is inviting you to share your knowledge by presenting at the 7th Annual Native American Training Institute Professional Education Program for Behavioral Health Professionals in Albuquerque, New Mexico, June 24-30, 2017.

The NATI has a unique history of educating Native American professionals to bring value to employers, facilities, programs, and communities. We welcome you to submit your application that engages, challenges, and educates behavioral health professionals – including social workers, judicial staff, tribal leaders, nurses, clergy, housing personnel, law enforcement, veterans, gaming industry professionals students, and many more who value the mental health and Native American values. There are a number of speaking opportunities available for you to contribute to your fellow professionals (see attached agenda at a glance for your area of expertise).

We are looking for concurrent speakers who reflect the NATI audience of behavioral health professionals and can share their experiences and also provide new thinking. We want to hear your thoughts from your own experience, building on what's worked (or not) in the real world. The NATI is a mixture of inspiration and implementation. Please note applications for keynote sessions will not be considered at this time.

Case studies, hands-on solutions, and strategy explorations are encouraged. Interaction in the classroom that goes beyond Q&A is a must – not only between speaker and attendees but also attendee-to-attendee. Preference will be given to those proposals that include a robust plan for actively engaging the audience.

Terms and Conditions

By submitting an application, all presenters and speakers agree to the terms and conditions outlined below.

1. The proposal submitter will serve as the primary contact for NATI and must have a valid email address.
